

- | | |
|--|--|
| 19a. Kingdom changed its name after first sack ([250], p. 70) | 19b. Western Empire changed its name after first destruction; kingdom of Ostrogoths was founded (see above) |
| 20a. At end of kingdom, its name was replaced by new one, related to term "Trojan" (= TRN if freed of vowels; ibid. ; cf. Franks = TRN) | 20b. At end of Western Third Empire, term "Tarquin" (= TRQN if freed of vowels) appeared (according to Livy) |
| 21a. Term "Trojan" is related to new king Troilus' name, who "built in the city more than others, and gives it his name Troy" (ibid.) | 21b. Term Tarquins (= TRQN) is related to new king Tarquinius' name (see overlapping above: Tarquinius Priscus = Valentinian III and Ricimer, whereas Tarquinius the Proud = Goths) |
| 22a. King Troilus was sixth among Trojan kings according to Trojan legends (according to other data, it was Laomedon) (ibid.) | 22b. Servius Tullius, Odoacer's and Theodoric's analogue, was Livy's sixth king in "regal" Rome |
| 23a. King Troilus (or Laomedon) founded kingdom with new name "Trojan". First invasion took place during his rule (ibid. et seq.) | 23b. Servius Tullius (= Odoacer and Theodoric) founded new German Gothic kingdom in 476-552 A.D. (see above). It was Odoacer (and Theodoric) who headed first invasion destroying 1st, purely Roman, "kingdom" |
| 24a. New term "Trojan" appeared at end of TR-kingdom (see above), being very close to Trajan | 24b. New name; Emperor Trajan ruling in 98-117 A.D. appeared at end of Second Empire, isomorphic to end of Third Empire (see above) |

To 24b: Trajan was a well-known ruler of the Second Empire, overlapping with Arcadius under the isomorphism of the Second and Third Empires in 395-408 A.D. Arcadius' (= Trajan's) rule is placed in immediate vicinity of Tarquinius Superbus reigning in 437-472 (see above). Thus, the terms "Trajan" and "Tarquin" are practically overlapping under the isomorphisms known to us earlier, viz., Second Empire = Third Empire = Livy's "regal" Rome, which indicates that the "Trojans" and "Tarquins" are identified.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 25a. So-called "Trojan" period in Trojan kingdom's history | 25b. So-called "Tarquinian" period in Roman kingdom's history (in Italy) |
|--|--|

These two time intervals are well consistent. The consistency will become ideal if we assume that the term "Tarquinius Superbus" = Trajan should be applied to Odoacer = Theodoric, and not to Valentinian III = Ricimer. It is possible that Livy interchanged the names of two neighbouring kings.